1. The faculty at AIS is highly qualified with wide range of experience at international and national institutions and programmes in research and teaching of international relations, having studies at and visited Cambridge, Oxford, US Fulbright Fellowship Programme.

2. The AIS faculty has created an expansive teaching and research programme enabling students, other academicians, diplomats, experts to learn from those interested in the publications and activities of AIS. The topics covered include globalisation, trade, politics, social identity, culture, conflicts, international organisations and strategic issues. As such it has become a leading centre of interdisciplinary and comparative studies on international relations with a worldwide network.

3. The number of international conferences and national ones, talks and workshops, the AIS has organised has by itself created global audience for its publications and participants for its activities.

4. The AIS attracts students not only from Jamia with its reservation for Muslim minority but from all parts of India, ranging Kashmir to Kerala and North-East to Rajasthan. It is getting an increasing number of students from abroad for its M.Phil and Ph.D programmes from Italy, Afghanistan, Mauritius, Libiya etc.

5. In India the AIS has the only language teaching programme in Uzbek and Mandarin (Chinese) funded by the national University of Taiwan (NIU). Many Students have won fellowships for doing higher studies in Chinese to go to Taipei. A Taiwanese Teacher has been deputed by the NIU.

6. The UGC has started successfully area study programmes on Pakistan, Central Asia, China and Afghanistan at AIS which have been very productive in terms of original research, and interaction at high political and diplomatic levels making the AIS also a Think Tank, AIS has influenced government in direct ways.

7. The AIS has built up its library named after Dr. Abid Husain. It has three floors full of latest books and journals on international relations, globalisation, security studies, etc. It has a documentation officer who provides the latest article and papers published in journals and the students also have access to nine computers, e-journals, newspapers. Many of AIS students have got teaching appointments, jobs in administration, journalism and media. They and the AIS faculty have been on field research visits to Afghanistan, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Japan, China, Vietnam, Turkey, etc. Their experience is growing with time considering that the AIS started its M.Phil./Ph.D. programme only from 2007/8. With help of the faculty they have written dissertations on varied original themes. These dissertations are available in the University's central Library named after Dr. Zakir Hussain, and in the departmental library. Before 2007/8 AIS also known then as Academy of Third World Studies was purely a research institute and many of its publications were brought out before 2008 which have not been included here. In 2011 the Academy of Third World Studies got its present name Academy of International Studies (AIS). AIS has scholars working on Africa, West Asia and Europe on which it can expand its research and teaching programmes in the future. The AIS library has been given an extension of four storeys, one is already built, and plenty of rooms to expand in the future.

Weaknesses and Challenges

1. Without an M.A. Programme in international studies, the AIS cannot provide a better base for its M.Phil./Ph.D. programmes and give time to students to improve their language skills, and master languages with which they can do even deeper research on different issues and areas. The AIS must also focus on publishing the Dissertations with the help of the ICSSR Programme.
2. The IT Infrastructure, smart classrooms, bringing out a journal, looking for more funding from foreign agencies putting in more A/Cs sending the faculty on leave to study abroad at other leading centres on International relations is the need of the hour. The UGC too should help in this process. Bringing better students and faculty will also help.
3. Training for competing for IFS and jobs in UN organisations should be started.
4. The faculty should monitor research continuously and involve external experts in evaluation even more than at present.

52. Future plans of the department

• To bring out a journal on international relations when funds are available. • To facilitate the learning of the language needed to do a Ph.D. • To hold international and national conferences on relevant subjects: Four are planned for the January-May Semester • To fill all the vacancies especially in the newly created centers for Afghanistan and China Studies. • To further expand African Studies. • To get funds to send students for field research.
