Abstract

Quality Assurance is a mechanism of monitoring quality performance of the higher education institutions through systematic management and assessment procedures. There is need of quality assurance in higher education to cater the ever increasing employment related demands of market, within the country and at the international level. The issue of quality assurance has drawn the attention of national level institutions in India like UGC, NAAC, AICTE, NCTE etc. In developed countries, many higher education institutions have given students a recognised status. Students are invited as evaluation experts with academic peer reviewers. They can raise concerns about teaching-learning effectiveness, quality of course content and learning environment. Benchmarking quality through student satisfaction surveys is a well established procedure in developed countries. The same trend may be followed in India also. Higher education is generally considered as a process and students may be considered as a product of education. Students can play an active role in benchmarking the quality of higher education and thus, can develop a quality culture of the institutions. As students are direct receivers and participators in the higher education process, the available study activities would influence their perceptions and satisfactions to the educational quality. As higher education is meant for the enhancement and empowerment of students as participants in a process of learning, students should be recognised as the key stakeholder in higher education. Student satisfaction data may provide valuable insights into how students have experienced higher education over a period of time and what changes can be done to increase the quality of the institution.

STUDENTS' LEARNING ENGAGEMENT: A CRUCIAL ACADEMIC CONSTRUCT FOR ENHANCING THE QUALITY OF EDUCATION

Abstract

The dynamic global progress has placed a lot of expectations on the part of educational institutions in terms of quality of learning outcomes and quality of education at large. In spite of educators and institutions investing so much effort and time into students' learning, students' curricular and co-curricular performance still has a large scope for improvement and enhancement. Here students' learning engagement comes into play which needs to be realized as a crucial academic construct by the stakeholders of education so that they may engage students actively into various curricular and co-curricular tasks thereby channelizing students' on-task learning experiences to create their own meanings and construct their own knowledge. The major themes of the present paper are that effective learning is an amalgam of productive teaching and learning; that engagement in learning activities is an indispensable part of the learning process; that students' learning engagement is a form of students' active participation and involvement in learning activities; and that students' learning engagement needs critical consideration to enhance the quality of education. Finally, the paper suggests a model for making students' learning engagement an integral component of students' learning to enhance the quality of education.

Abstract

This paper attempts to find a potential relationship between transformational leadership and teacher collective efficacy, with a belief to establish a better way of achieving school targets with minimum investments and help increase student learning. A survey was conducted in 6 secondary schools of NCR area, capturing responses from 75 teachers. Statistical analysis was done on the responses and a positive moderate correlation between the variables, transformational leadership and teacher collective efficacy, was established. Paper concludes that leadership style has a direct impact on teachers' collective outcome and hence suggests that training school principals in transformational leadership style is a low cost investment with higher returns.

SYNERGIZING THE ORGANIZATIONAL CLIMATE THROUGH LEADERSHIP MODEL FOR SUCCESSFUL ORGANIZATION

Abstract

Intellectual curiosity can be said as the most important characteristics for a researcher but if it is accompanied by adaptability, no one can stop the person to reach to the heights. Leadership and governance need to become a priority in education policy agendas nationally. Mainly three factors which influence learners' achievements are: involvement of parents, teaching quality, and Institutional leadership. Performance of institution is strongly associated by the leadership of school. One of the powerful ways to improve classroom transaction is a good leadership. There is a need to prepare, train and develop leaders in institutions. Effective leadership development programmes should be organized that are institutional level based and on-the-job. An addition to be made in this program However, out-of-school activities should be included as a supplement to teach teachers various approaches of leadership, reading, reflection, and interaction with peers in other schools. Mentoring and instruction will benefit to the newly appointed leaders. Skills and expertise of leaders having successful records can help to support newly appointed individuals. It is vice-chancellor's (university level) and principal's (institution level) responsibility to identify leadership talent and potential. Freedom to talent is required in leadership. Some organisations are poor at managing talent; they suffocate potential. Assurance of positively managed talent should be there in the organization. An Educational Institute needs lots of leaders at all levels so leadership teams should be developed. Student leadership programmes need to be considered so that it help to increase student participation in the running of the institution. Descriptive type of research will be used. Being Uttar Pradesh is the largest state of India and Lucknow is it capital, sample is used from Lucknow city. Systematic sampling is used to get the opinions from various professors who have worked or are working as head of the department in various universities. A sample of 50 professors will be taken 10 each from Central University, State University, Private University and two from private college affiliated to state university. A leadership model is prepared keeping in mind their opinions, success and failure track records. Concluding the study reveals that a developed model will help all the institution to synergize the organization towards the success in efficient manner utilizing optimum resources thereby help to assure quality at higher level.

REFLECTIVE PRACTICES THROUGH ACTION RESEARCH- KEY TO QUALITY EDUCATION

Dr Jasmeet Kaur

(Assistant professor, Faculty of Education,
Manav Rachna University, Faridabad.

Abstract

Higher education is the source of capacity building in different walks of life and therefore providing the efficient human resources in economy, management, planning, medical, teaching and research etc. But in today's dynamic and diverse environment in our society, we need to rethink about our higher Education system in order to derive such structural changes in the system that can lead to value enhancement and practicability to our education system. Among the key criteria given by NAAC which serve as basis of assessment of higher education institutes, one of the main criteria is research, innovation and extension. It is also reflected in one of the mission statements of the NAAC which aims at encouraging self-evaluation, accountability, autonomy and innovations in higher education. Also one of the important role of Universities as listed by the Kothari Commission is 'to seek and cultivate new knowledge, to engage vigorously and fearlessly in the pursuit of truth, and to interpret old knowledge and beliefs in the light of new needs and discoveries.' Research has wide dimensions with respect to higher education. Author strongly believes that Action Research has great implications for betterment of higher education. Action researchers need to develop a reflexive mind-set. Policy makers and policy implementers in an institution should aim at taking some constructive projects, needed modifications and contextual initiatives. Higher education practitioners need to keep pace with a fast changing sector and to get updated knowledge through continuous research attempts. It is evident that in order to develop as professionals, we need to continually review our own beliefs and assumptions. More contextual experimental studies measuring policy effects would be particularly helpful as what works in one institution may not work in another. Therefore in this paper, author has attempted to highlight significance of action research in enhancing quality of higher education, examples of action research areas and reflections on action research.

Abstract

Higher education system plays an important role in developing the specific skills among individuals to enhance their employability in the labour market. In recent past the most of the Indian states have spent heavily on education infrastructure to enable their youth prepared for meeting the changing requirements of labour market in light of globalisation and more integral world. It is extremely essential for HEIs to provide an effective learning environment where the students not just only complete their essential qualification but they become employable as well, possessing the requisite skills as desired by the professional world. The present study aims to construct index for potential environment for higher education using indicators such as number of universities, colleges, standalone institutions, enrolment, population, gross enrolment ratio (GER), literacy rate, pupil teacher ratio, gross state domestic product (GSDP), and expenditure. The study is proposed to be based on secondary data which would be collected from various government reports (AISHE report, Census report, RBI and MHRD reports) and ranking would be assigned to different states and UTs of India with regard to their potential education environment. The ranking would be done by developing a composite index based on the indicators mentioned above.

A CORRELATION STUDY OF LINKAGE BETWEEN RESEARCH AND PRACTICE FOR ANALYSING MATHEMATIZATION IN MATHEMATICS LEARNING

Abstract

Despite NCF -2005 putting Mathematization as a higher aim of mathematical learning, the concept may at best be put in a nascent stage. Further, Horizontal and Vertical Mathematization (Menon U, 2012) have been found to be the key parameters around which quality education in mathematics revolve. Recent researches in the area have substantiated the importance of mathematization in typical mathematics classrooms. But the larger question signifying how the researchers actually communicate their findings to practitioners has not yet been fully researched. Similarly, it is almost mandatory that views of practitioners should reach researchers for refinement in their research. As the actual implementers are the practitioners a linkage relationship between research and practice is bound to exist. Research is all about finding improvement in learning and practice mainly focuses on student's performance. So it is very important to look into its theoretical and empirical aspects i.e. what is happening and what should have happened?

However, in actuality there seems to exist a blame game between the two. Researchers often accuse the practitioners of not implementing the research findings well. At the same time, practitioners would say that researchers are not taking feedbacks from them and hence there seems to exist some gaps between the two. In this backdrop, the current paper tries to analyse if there is a significant relationship that exists between the two through mathematical treatment of correlation analysis with mathematization as a basis.. A high degree of relationship would show that the findings of research are actually practiced and then "findings" of practice are actually being communicated to researchers for further refinement.

However, the detailed mathematical analysis described in the paper shows the contrary i.e. a weak correlation has been found that suggests more communication is required to fill this gap created inadvertently.

QUALITY ASSURANCE IN HIGHER EDUCATION: ISSUE OF ACADEMIC REPETITION AND FREEDOM

Abstract

This paper is an attempt to look into the quality aspect of higher education with two reference point, firstly, academic repetition and secondly, academic freedom. While doing so, this would try to argue that the repetition of curriculum over the period of time and methods of evaluation, is hampering the qualitative aspect of higher education. It has been found that once the curriculum by the department and center is being formulated then there is very little scope of change and improvement in the same. The same curriculum/syllabus is being taught in the university and colleges without much change and add to it. Moreover, this would argue that because the teacher wants to ease in the teaching and if there would be frequent change in the same then they have to do read and prepare for the delivering the lecture in the classroom. Moreover, when we talk about the forms and methods of evaluation, then the same pattern of evaluation is being followed by the teachers over the period of time. There is very little scope to ask about the methods of evaluation by the target group i.e. the students. To put it another way, the students are rarely being asked about their interest in the forms and methods of evaluations. Generally, teachers follow the summative means of evaluation. Moreover, this paper would make an attempt to argue that to maintain the quality of higher education, the academic freedom in the form of choice of curriculum/syllabus, methods of evaluation, choosing the topic for the research, independent and innovative methods of teachings, are some of the indispensable conditions to flourish the qualitative aspect of the same.

Abstract

The paper relates the growth of higher education in India to the changing funding pattern and suggests ways to ensure that higher education remains both affordable and accessible to all. The author emphasizes the need for greater adaptability in the higher education system so that it continues to provide the needed skills and trained workforce to the economy as it integrates with the world economy. Policy measures required to promote, sustain, and enhance world-class research are also included. Considering the weaknesses in the prevailing regulatory and quality assurance environment, the paper provides a roadmap for reforms towards improved accountability of the system.

HIGHER EDUCATION REFORMS: DYNAMIC GLOBAL SCENARIO

Poonam Choudhary

Assistant Professor, Department of Botany, Dronacharya Government College, Gurugram.

Abstract

In context of increasing competition in scientific fraternity and other allied fields, higher educational reforms need to be introduced and advised from time to time. At the university level, institutional restructuring process needs to reorganise various spheres of university activities and following areas needs special emphasis such as restructuring of academic programmes such as e-learning programmes, introduction of digital libraries, etc. Restructuring recruitments of highly personified staff and ensuring their management, revising student evaluation procedures in line with credit system performance evaluation procedures of employees and finally restructuring of the management system of universities should be considered and relevant amendments should be structured.

Reforms in higher education are however, very often financially driven. Under the Centrally Sponsored Scheme of Rashtriya Uchchatar Shiksha Abhiyan (RUSA), the overall quality of existing state higher educational institutions is sought to be improved by ensuring proper norms and standards to be followed and adoption of accreditation as a mandatory quality assurance framework. Under RUSA, participating states are permitted to mobilise 50% of the state contribution of funding.

The University Grants Commission (UGC) has taken various measures for educational reforms such as introduction of the semester system, regular updating curricula and Choice Based Credit System (CBCS). UGC has already issued UGC Minimum Qualifications for appointment of teachers and other academic staff in universities and colleges. It has also ensured measures for maintenance of standards in Higher Education Regulation in 2010, for improving the standard of teaching in Indian Universities.

The All India Council of Technical Education (AICTE) emphasises on various schemes such as “Faculty Development Programmes” and “Visiting Professorship” to promote quality of Technical education. National Assessment and Accreditation Council (NAAC) has also issued the mandatory accreditation of all Programs/ Courses in technical and non-technical educational institutions, universities, departments and institutes deemed to be universities.

In this process of institutional restructuring, the time allocations to various activities and responsibilities handed over to individuals and budget allocations to departments should be monitored for transparency in operation for effective implementation of the newer reforms in years to come.

Abstract

UGC through its regulation in 2010 introduced Points Based Appraisal System to improve academic standard among faculty in higher educational institutes in India. There have been four amendments in these regulations, latest being fourth amendment notified in the Gazette of India on July 11, 2016. Teachers have been subjected to acquire points in three major categories, Category I being related to their classroom performance, Category II being associated with other academic activities in the corporal life of the institute. The last category, that is, Category III being linked to individual specific research and capacity enrichment. It is quite unquestionable that quality improvement procedures must be there for any organization to infuse motivation and accountability among its employees. In that sense the spirit behind PBAS is quite praiseworthy. But the response it has generated from all stakeholders in various universities and colleges in India has not been up to the mark. There have been almost no career advancements among faculties. Not only those who could not attain minimum API score under PBAS but also those who managed to qualify the benchmark have not got their promotions due to many confusions and ambiguities in these regulations. The purpose of this paper is to develop an understanding about various aspects, pros and cons of point system and suggest improvement in this system or a possible alternative.

- Who are the high performing researchers within my institution and who should I recruit?
- Which collaborations are successful and which ones should our organization cultivate or at individual level which I could nurture?
- Who are the top funders in the research areas where my university perform the best or which can be identified for my research topic?
- Can I prove "ROI" for previous grants from a funding body?
