

Notification No

F.NO.COF/Ph.D./ (notification)/524/2022

Date of award: - 25/10/2022

Name-Kaushar Ali

Topic- Resressal Mechanism and Protection against Copyright with Special Reference to Plagiarism in India

Department of law

Under the supervision of

Prof. (Dr.) Eqbal Hussain

Major findings of the study

Plagiarism and infringement of copyright work has been one of the debatable issues for last two decades. Avoiding it very essential for the academic excellence of any nation because the development and progress of any country depend upon the science and technology and possible only if it is based on honest research. The study is expected to contribute towards creating awareness to avoid infringement of copyright work and plagiarism. Moreover, this study distillates post graduate students and research scholar, and if they aware of infringement of copyright work and plagiarism in the early stage of research and writing any articles, they will avoid it throughout their whole life and produce good research. Apart from this, this study will be helpful to find out the root cause of reproducing the work of others and, by identifying issues; it will be easier to prevent plagiarism and infringement of copyright work. Plagiarism is not exclusively confined to the domain of research; it infects all parts of the body of human efforts as the film industry, music, journalism, fine arts and creative and critical writing, but this study is exclusively concerned with plagiarism in the field research.

- Presently plagiarism is a very serious issue in academic world

- The role of judiciary to protect against copyright infringement has been a qualified success
- Copyright protection in India suffers from a lack of adequate legal protection of electronically available content
- The arrival of ICT is the major issue for the rise in plagiarism.
- Plagiarism breaks the part of trust, expectation and honesty, that could be a demand for intellectual add a moral framework
- While technological progress is a boon, it comes with lot of problem the policies programs and laws have to keep traces of technological progress and make suitable amendment in the same to make use of the best effects of such development
- I think, it is necessary for institutions to come out of their apathy towards government policy formulation and legislation in copyright and plagiarism matter. It is to be looked current legislation is sufficient to enable to continue their mission of educating people or whether any amendments in laws are required to facilitates their task their task in the light of new technologies
- I think, now time has come that parliament should endeavor to pass new law regarding plagiarism which is applied to all universities irrespective of Central, State, Private and Deemed University.